

Dear Customer:

I am writing to you in relation to your financed purchase of physical precious metals. The Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) has alleged that no physical metals actually backed your transaction(s). As a result, on February 22, 2013, in the government enforcement action of CFTC v. Hunter Wise Commodities, LLC, et al. (the "CFTC Action"), the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida (the "District Court") entered the attached Order Temporarily Appointing Special Corporate Monitor (the "Appointment Order"), and, on February 25, 2013, entered the Order on Plaintiff's Motion for Preliminary Injunction (the "Preliminary Injunction Order"). Hunter Wise was the company that handled the transaction(s) for your broker or dealer; therefore, your account is affected by these Order.

Please carefully review the attached Orders so you understand the extent and scope of the Special Monitor/Corporate Manager's duties and authority and the Preliminary Injunction. Within 30 days, the Special Monitor/Corporate Manager will provide you with additional information regarding your account. For further information regarding the CFTC Action and how it may affect you, please contact the CFTC's hotline at 312-596-0608 and visit the CFTC's website (www.cftc.gov/ConsumerProtection/CaseStatusReports/HunterWise). You may also contact the Special Monitor/Corporate Manager at 305-542-4410 and HunterWiseManager@dvlip.com. Finally, you may visit the Hunter Wise website (<http://www.hwcom.com>), which is now under the control of, and will contain information regarding the CFTC Action provided by, the Special Monitor/Corporate Manager.

Please understand that neither the Special Monitor/Corporate Manager nor any of her attorneys or other representatives may provide you with legal, tax and/or accounting advice in connection with this or any other matter. Should you require such advice, the Special Monitor/Corporate Manager asks that you contact your own attorney, accountant or other professional.

The Special Monitor/Corporate Manager encourages you to periodically visit the CFTC website and the Hunter Wise website as they will be updated with additional information throughout the course of the CFTC Action. Thank you.

Regards,

Kenneth Dante Murena, P.A.
